Strengthening European Identity through Culture and Education and how to manage it

Citizenship is nowadays a topic discussed from a local up to an EU level and in all domains of society. The role of culture, more precisely the role and responsibility of cultural institutions, has to be (re)defined. This panel will discuss the changing environment the cultural institutions are confronted with and the necessity to find new ways of communication with their regular audience, potential new stakeholders in the direct social environment as well as citizens' initiatives and international innovators in the field. The overall impact envisaged is to contribute, during turbulent times in Europe, to the current discussion about European Citizenship by being a relevant point of orientation for a growing group of interested citizens.

Moderation: Farid Tabarki panelists: Izabella Agardi, Kathrin Deventer, Jody Jensen, Mario Neve, Miguel Angel Martin Ramos
